¶¶ The above 17th century "Garden Book" manuscript is of special interest, chiefly because it is for the most part horticultural, dealing with flowers and gardens simply as "the purest of humane pleasures," with little regard to the herbalist. He was a friend of John Ray, the horticulturist [1627–1705]—whose "Flora, Ceres and Pomona" was inspired by Hanmer—and of John Evelyn, the diarist [1620–1706], who sought Hanmer's advice in the lay-out of his famous garden at Sayes Court.
